

Removing the established business relationship qualification from the fax regulations is absolutely a mistake. As an association executive keeping in touch with our members is paramount and using facsimile is an excellent tool to advise members of new programs and services. Further, non-members with an establish business relationship are interested in our programs and services. The decision to eliminate the established business relationship requirement places an undue burden, both financial and manpower on not-for-profit organizations.